Notice of Public Update Meeting Kilally Infrastructure Project

In response to residential housing development needs in the northeast part of London, the City of London is preparing to upgrade Kilally Road between Webster Street and Clarke Road. This project is expected to begin construction in 2025 and is anticipated to last two construction years, with minor restoration work in the third year.

We are planning to host two public meetings for residents and businesses to learn about construction impacts and see the design drawings.

About the Project

This project will upgrade Kilally Road between Webster Street and Sandford Street to a 2-lane urban road featuring concrete curbs, gutters, bike lanes, and sidewalks. Additionally, the stretch between Webster Street and Clarke Road will be reconstructed as a rural cross-section with ditches, wider asphalt and on-street bike lanes. The project also involves the installation of new water mains along with sanitary and storm sewers to support future development in northeast London. Sandford Street will also undergo asphalt rehabilitation.

This project will be constructed primarily over a two year period, as described below:

- 2025 construction will take place on Kilally Road between Sandford Street and Clarke Road
- 2026 construction will take place on Kilally Road between Webster Street and Sandford Street
- 2027 construction will consist of minor cleanup work and the placing of surface asphalt

There will be periods of road closures and detours during each construction phase. Further information about each phase, the stages within the phase, and the impacts will be provided in a subsequent letter prior to construction.
