

London's climate is changing.

We can expect that there will be more frequent extreme weather and temperatures that will impact our health and safety. Mitigating and adapting to climate change requires taking action now and planning for further changes.

How is London responding?

London City Council has declared a Climate Emergency, and the City is developing a Climate Emergency Action Plan.

This is a community plan, not just a City plan.

Our community's plan strives to reduce our greenhouse gas emissions by at least 30% by 2030 and reach net-zero by 2050. Our plan will be designed to evolve over time as we move towards this goal.

How can our community take action?

We're currently identifying actions to reduce our greenhouse gas emissions and improve our resilience to climate impacts. Actions will focus on five strategic categories.

How We Live

Helping Londoners respond and prepare for climate change at home.

How We Green

Building a greener city by reducing our impact and protecting natural resources.

How We Move

Providing low/no emission transportation choices that make London easy to get around and connect our city to the region.

How We Grow

Ensuring London becomes a mixed use compact city using green development and redevelopment standards and incentives.

How We Prosper

Driving innovation in our community that helps London become climate change resilient.

Get involved and share your feedback.

➤ getinvolved.london.ca/climate

✉ climateaction@london.ca

London
CANADA

Understand our greenhouse gas emissions.

London's largest source of greenhouse gas emissions is from personal vehicles, and our community's largest energy expense is gasoline.

Measure your impact.

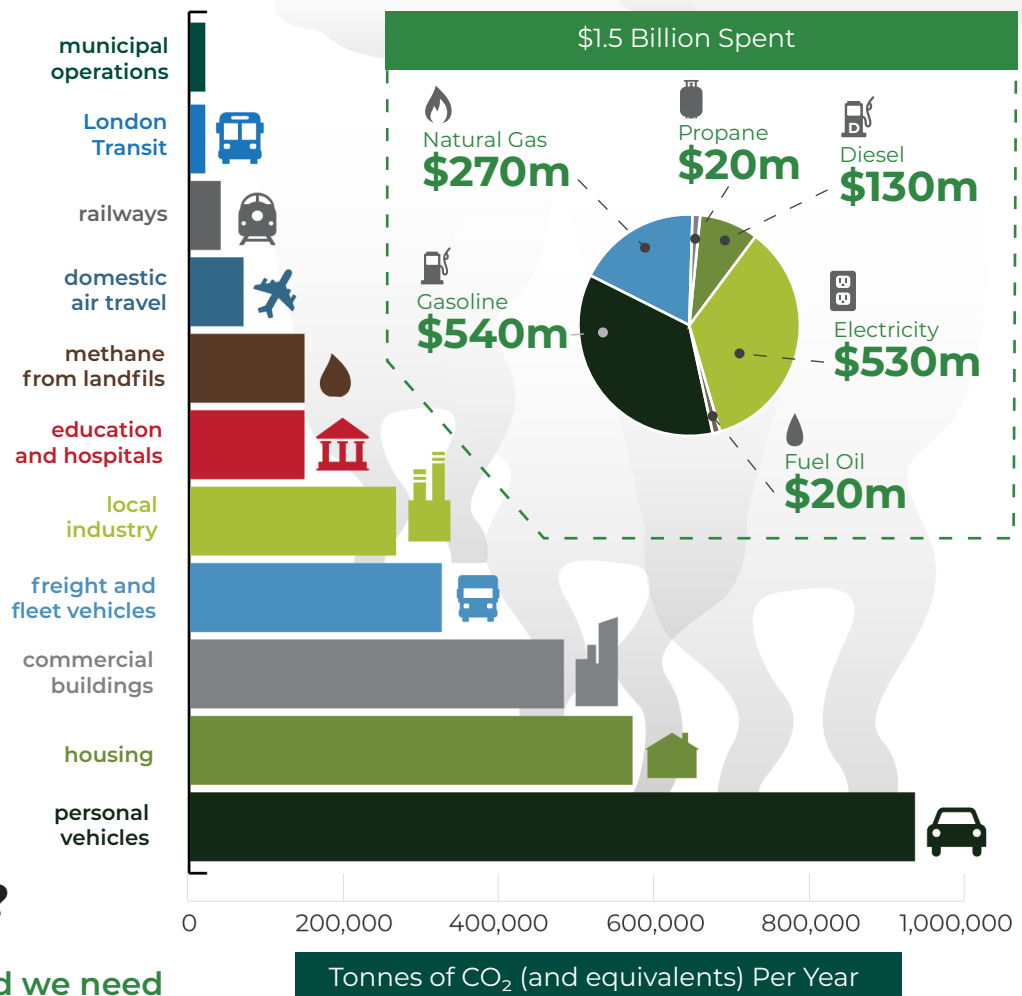

More than 1,000 London households have already used Project Neutral's carbon calculator to create a personalized action plan, and start making a positive impact.

projectneutral.org/london

How can we work together?

Your choices matter and we need everyone's help to establish our community's response to the climate emergency.

Are you or your organization able to play a role in, co-lead, or partner with us? If so, please connect with our team.

Get involved and share your feedback.

getinvolved.london.ca/climate
climateaction@london.ca

